One difficulty my partner and I encountered was that for some reason, my program wasn't working. So my partner and I scanned through the code and found there was a value called n. But on my partners code it was marked n2. So i went in and changed it from an n to an n2. One opportunity we encountered was when we were sending out our messages to other groups and the code it wasn't working on some of the programs. So my partner and I deduced that most of the other groups had their e and n values mixed up so we informed them and ourselves in fact and labeled the values e= and n=. Indepently, I worked on decoding the messages we were receiving from other groups and displaying what they said in the decrypted box.